Our friend and fellow-citizen, Mr. A. G. Chew, showed us yesterday a curious relic of the times before the Revolution. It was a much-wern silver spoon, which belonged to his grandfather, Col. Beverly Winslow, who was Speaker of the House of Burgesses in Virginia before and at the breaking out of the Revolution, and the colonel of a regiment in the Virginia line afterwards. Colonel Winslow bought this spoon, as one of a set, in Liverpool second years before the Declaration of Indeence; and, in the course of the march of Colonel Tarlton through Virginia, it was hidden by Colonel W.'s wife, with other valuables, in a potato-hill as a precaution against robbery. The other spoons of the set belong to different descendants of Col. Winslow, and all resemble in shape and style of finish and workmanship those used in supping the-

VALUABLE TURNIP. - Last year, Hon. Humphrey Marshall sent to some of the best farmers in Kentucky specimens of various kinds of turnip seeds from the patent office. Among these were seeds of the turnip called the "Golden Ball." Mr. Andrew Hikes, who was one of the farmers favored by Col. M. brought us one of the "Golden Ball" turnips yesterday morning. It is exceedingly round low all the way through, and of a deliciousness of flavor truly remarkable. If the "Golden Ball" yields a fine crop, as we have no doubt it does, it will come into general use throughout the West as fast as the seeds can be procured. Col. M. has in this matter rendered the Western public an essential service.

We learn that an excellent company of emigrants to Nicaragua will leave here about the 15th of this month, under the command of a well known and highly esteemed gentleman of this State, whose gallant services in the Mexican war and high-souled bearing on all occasions, together with his eminently kind and amiable social qualities are a sure guaranty of his success in this new enterprize. He will carry with him our most sincere wishes for his welfare and prosperity.

The Illinois is rising slowly, and is now in good boating order. The upper Mississippi is rising fast with full six feet water to Keokuk. It is also rising all the way from St. Paul down. At this point the water is rising slowly but steadily. It had risen one foot during the twenty-four immensely large, of a golden yelhours ending at dark last evening. During the > CONSEQUENCES OF DISTINION -- HOP. W. B. Reed, of Philadelphia, has written a letter to the citizens of Franklin county, Pennsylvania, in which he thus forcibly depicts the consequences of disunion:

I remember, years ago, on a bright summer's afternoon, toiling up the turnpike road on the Cove Mountain, in your county, and, when I reached the summit, turning to gaze on as beautiful a scene as ever gladdened my eye, the valley of peaceful beauty which stretches off into Maryland and towards the Potomac. It is a familiar scene to most of you. To me it was new, and its impression has never faded from my mind. As far as the eye could reach there was fertility—the signs of tranquil industry; all was beautiful—all was peaceful; it looked, as it was, like the abode of a happy and united people. The political line, separating Pennsylvania from Maryland, traced by those old-fashioned surveyors, Charles Mason and fashioned surveyors, Charles Mason an Jeremiah Dixon, was visible to no eye. Man a farm was separated by i'; but, except in th a farm was separated by F; but, except in the eye of the law, no one knew it or cared about it.
I have often—for painful thoughts are thrusting themselves upon me—recalled that scene of actual beauty and united interest, and realized what it would be—what must be the condition of every county of this Commonwealth lying on the Maryland line—Chester, Lancaster, York, Adams, Franklin, Fulton, Bedford, Somerect Expecte. and Green—if disunion beerset, Fayette, and Green—if disunion be forced on us, and the rupture be, as it would forced on us, and the rupture be, as it would be, between what are popularly, but falsely, called the free and slave States—between us and Maryland. I wish every man could be made to understand what a frontier is, even that of civilized life. Its daily, hourly vexations and dangers—its line of custom-houses to keep the smuggler in and out—the crowds of fugitives from justice and labor, infesting every avenue and concealed in every thicket—the murderer striking down his victim to-day and flying with the fresh blood on his hand to a foreign territory to-morrow—the hieraring flying with the fresh blood on his hand to a foreign territory to-morrow—the bickering, the strife, the hot blood of conterminous dispute—all this would be the daily doom of every southern county in this State; and across the beautiful valley I have spoken of would be distressingly visible the actual broad, perhaps bloody, line which disunion must trace. This is true, though hard to conceive. Pennsylvania, and you, citizens of Franklin county, have so long reposed in the centre of the Union that you cannot understand how you can become a frontier, and how you will suffer when you do. [From this morning Journal.]

[Special Dispatch to the Louisville Journal ] NEW YORK, Nov. 10.

The Republican wire pullers are now proposing to send Fremont to the U.S. Senate from this State, to leave the course free for Seward in 1860, and thus carry out the original secret programme of Weed & Co., which was to destroy the American party, and almost, but not quite, elect Fremont, and in the mean while to unite all the opposition elements at the North into the Republican party. These Abolition parties forced a third ticket in Pennsylvania and New Jersey most unnaturally at the last moment, with the double purpose of preventing the success of the Americans, and the election from going into the House, where Fremont would have had another chance. The breach is now so wide between the Americans and Republicans that it can never be healed. The Americans polled a larger vote in both the city and State than ever before, and will hereafter stand together.

[For the Louisville Journal ] PROTECTING TREES FROM FROST.

DELAFIELD, WIS., Oct. 11, 1855.

Messes. Editors:—I notice in your weekly issue Oct. 8, an inquiry by S. H. C., as to what effect would be produced on securing the peach crop from the effects of cold by throwing in (about the first of December) to the tops of the trees a few loads of straw until the spaces between the limbs are filled up then binding between the limbs are filled up, then binding with vines so as to bring the top of the tree into the form of a haystack; and inviting the experience of correspondents on the subject.

Two years ago I gave this plan a fair trial, and am satisfied that in this climate it will not only injure the fruit but endanger the life of the tree. What would be the effect of a stack of hay or straw built over the tree, as you suggest, I cannot say, but your correspondent will find it impossible, without commencing his stack at the ground, to get the head so compact as to exclude the wet, and, as your freezes generally occur soon after a rain, the wet straw will become frozen about the tender buds and branches; the straw will prevent its thawing out, and they are kept enveloped in a case of ice for a long time.

Now it is a fact as ascertained beyond question, that the danger to the tree from cold is dependent less upon the degree than the duration of the temperature—add to this the injury likely to be inflicted by the expansion and retraction of the ice-coats upon the buds and

After many years of experiment on the peach, I will venture to suggest, with diffidence, a much safer, easier, and, I think, a better plan, to be found simply in a proper system of branch

Kentucky possesses one of the finest peach soils in the world, but it is a little too far north for it to be left entirely to its own efforts against your changeable and to it inclement winters My suggestion is:

At the first opening of Spring, just as the warmth is beginning to expand the bud, "cut back" about one-third of the limbs of last back" about one-third of the limbs of last year's growth; that is, cut one-half of the last year's growth from a third of the limbs. The tree feels sensibly the "shock of injury;" no further expansion or growth takes place till it recovers from the shock and the injury is repaired. A light ploughing of the orchard about the same time will similarly prune the roots, and your blossoms are put back from one to three weeks. Your work is now done till fall, or at least late summer. So soon as your fruit is off of the tree. summer. So soon as your fruit is off of the tree, let it undergo another such pruning as it had in the Spring. By this you stop the fall growth, harden and mature the buds, and thus prepare your tree for the hardest winter that is ever likely to occur in your climate. A. L. C.

Remarks .- The plan of shortening in and rootpruning just before the time of putting out of the blossoms is worthy of trial. We should re ly most upon the root-pruning and should recommend a more thorough practice with the spade in addition to plowing. As to pruning after the fruit is gathered, we fear that in this latitude when we frequently have warm weather in October it would produce just the opposite effect to that desired; particularly in the early sorts, we should expect a late second growth as the result of this early autumn pruning, which would not sufficiently mature to stand a severe winter without injury. We are glad to receive these suggestions from different sources and hope others will give their views, and try experiments. By this means only can we solve these problems.

Three Men Killed.—The 9:15 P. M. Express train on the Lafayette Railroad, night before last, in the vicinity of Zionsville, ran over a hand car on which were four Irishmen, employed on the road, killing two of them almost instantly, and severely injuring the others, one of them perhaps mertally.—N. A. Ledger.

WONDERS OF THE TELEGRAPH .- Professor Morse writes from Europe, giving the details of a full experiment on a continuous telegraphic line for two thousand miles, by which the practicability of sending a flash by a submarine telegraph across the Atlantic is demonstrated. Professor M. is now engaged in superintending the wiring of the Old World; and the London Times of October 13th pays him the highest compliment, and thus anticipates the speedy telegraphic union of all nations:

There is an old Arabian tale in which three young princes are represented as having obtained possession of three implements, the works of the genii, which were esteemed the most wonderful of which man had yet heard. There was a small telescope which could assist the sight of the observer to penetrate thousands of miles from the spot on which he stood. There was a carpet which transported any one who took his station upon it swift as a wish to any place to which he desired to go. There was an apple which healed all diseases if the patient out inhaled the fragrance of its sunny rind. Such were the subjects of the tales with which the Arabs soothed the monotony of their mid-night encampments, and which the Indian story-teller related to his swarthy audience under the arch of the city gate in the short twilights of the East. The imaginations of the most imaginative races had been taxed to their utmost stretch to conceive what miracles could be performed if the supernatural powers might be made favorable to man, and such were the results Science in these modern times, and human reason acting, as we believe, under the immediate guidance of Providence, have outstripped these fanciful legends of the Eastern

There is no Oriental poet who ventured to imagine that a dweller in Damascus or Bagdad could communicate his thoughts to the utmost limits of the habitable world instantaneously as they were conceived in his own brain. Their notions of physical geography were so limited that the Easterns had no conception of the true form of the planet which we inhabit. Had they, however, been told that the world was a sphere, and that the thought of man could be made to encompass it like a girdle, rapidly as the flash which rent the clouds asunder, and passed away ere one could say it lightened, how poor in comparison with such a result would all the wonders have appeared which, as they supposed, lay hidden from human eye, and sealed for ages to come under the sacred signet of Solomon! The electric telegraph is the miracle of modern times. As yet this invention is but in its infancy; but already all Europe is traversed by its wires, and the con-tinent, too, of North America. In the course of the next two or three years we trust to see results far more extensive. The wire is already coiled up which is to be cast into the depths of the Atlantic. The mountains and valleys of that great sea have been fathomed to ascertain the most convenient course for its deposit. In a brief space the electric spark which is generated in London will pass as swiftly as the exigencies of its own nature require to the great cotton city on the delta of the Mississippi, and to that rude town, whichever it may be, which may then lie furthest westward in the domains of the buffalo and the red man. Contemporaneously with this gigantic result, we have other laborers in the same field at work, who are busily engaged in fixing the tramroad for the electric spark between the European continent and the northern shores of Africa. This limit once obtained, the lightning thought can flash freely on its course across the old land of the Egyptian; whether by the Red sea or across the plains of Mesopotamia, to the cities of our Indian empire, and in due time, no doubt, to the grand centres of Chinese commerce. Nor is this all. The wire which had been laid down from London in one direction will soon be carried to the city of the Califor-nia gold-digger. The corresponding wire on which we have just marked a few stations will then be borne across the Chinese seas and the Northern Pacific, touching, as it may be, on its way at the mysterious empire of Japan, and will be linked on at San Francisco to the westand disappear, but in that moment of time it will have encompassed the planet on which we are whirling through space into eternity. That spark will be a human thought!

THE AFRICAN SLAVE TRADE.—The Charles ton (S. C.) Standard, assuming that slavery is to be extended in Kansas and other Southwestern territory, and that, consequently, more slaves will be needed, proposes to reopen the African slave trade. In one of a series of articles on the subject, that paper thus answers what has been urged as a Southern objection to the importation of "wild Africans:"

It has been feared that the coming of so many wild Africans will endanger the public peace that they will have the tendency to rise agains their masters, and that the masters may fail of the ability to keep them always in subjection. But in the first place, it must be remembered that few will come who have not been trained to subjection in Africa. Even as the equal members of the wild tribes, they are accustomed to despotic authority, but all of them must be slaves before they can be sold to the slave trader. The rude authority necessary to keep them in subjection to a barbarian master will have sufficiently disciplined them to obedience, even if they had ever known the rights and habits of freedom. When brought here, therefore, they will have nothing to unlearn.

Guns and Amunition Seized .- We learned bowie-knives, and a quantity of powder were seized last night at the Courier office by Lieut. Fremaux and his police, and carried to the chief's office. The reason of this procedure, it is said, was that information had been given that the arms were stored there for purposes in contravention to law.—N. O. Delta, Nov. 4.

CIDER. - Farmers who have large orchards are generally in the habit of making their inferior apples or those which will not keep into cider. There are some who have crab orchards and well-constructed mills and presses, and who pride themselves on the excellence of their cider, but the large majority simply grand up their inferior and unsound fruit and are satisfied to sell the muddy juice for sweet cider at any price it will bring.

Well-made crab cider is always in demand at fair prices, and much of this has suffered much from having been fermented at too high a temperature, by which a roughness is produced, rendering it very much inferior to an article properly prepared from the same fruit.

Nearly every manufacturer of cider claims to have some secret for its management. There a few rules to be observed requisite to complete success, by observing which any one can succeed and without which no really good, sound, healthy cider can be made.

The apples for cider must be fully ripe, ound, and clean. All parts of the mill, press, straw, casks, and everything which comes in contact with the fruit or juice must be scrupulously clean.

Neither the pumice nor juice must be exposed to a high temperature—a temperature from 45 to 50 deg. is the most suitable. At a higher temperature, the spirits produced from the sugar of the juice is changed to acetic acid or vinegar more rapidly as the temperature advances until it reaches 95 deg., at which temperature the whole of the spirits is rapidly changed into vinegar. This acetic fermentation is entirely suspended at about 46 deg., while the vinous fermentation or the change of the saccharine matter into spirits still goes on at that temperature. This will at once explain the importance of a due regard to temperature in the management of cider or wine. It should also be remembered that contact with atmospheric air is requisite to the formation of vinegar, so that while exclusion of the air and a temperature of about 46 deg. are important in making cider, a temperature of about 95 deg. and free access of air are requisite for the formation of vinegar.

It is a common impression that the roughest and sourest apples make the best eider; but if made properly the juice of the apples which contain the largest proportion of sugar will make the best cider. Yet the taste of the fruit is not a sure test as to the amount of sugar they contain, as the absence of acids may give a sweet taste to apples which really contain less sugar than some sour ones.

Hewes Crab and Harrison Crab are the favorite cider apples of this country. The latter is the apple said to produce the celebrated Newark cider, so much of which is sold for champagne. The cider made from it is decidedly superior to that from the Hewes crab, but the quantity of juice for a given quantity of fruit s much smaller.

The Newtown pippin makes a very superior cider while sweet; and if fermented at the proper temperature and racked well, with the addition of a little sugar to give the juice as much weight or body as that of the Harrison crab, it will make a very fine cider for bottling. The Hewes crab has just the properties which produce a fine cider with but little care in management. Mence its popularity.

It is not generally known that the Siberian crab makes a very superior cider. We have seen a sample prepared from this fruit that very may generate a spark at London, which, with one fiery leap, will return back under his hand.

There are some varieties of this crab that are larger than Hewes's crab, with all the beauty and transparency of the small fruit. When these large crabs become generally known, we have no doubt they will become very popular as a cider apple.

> In Cooley's Cyclopedia of Practical Recipes, the following direction is given for manufacturing cider champagne: "Good pale vinous cider (such as Harrison crab) 1 hogshead; proof spirits (pale) 3 gallons; honey or sugar 14 lbs. Let them remain together in a temperate situation for 1 month; then add orange flower water quart, and fine it down with skimmed milk ! a gallon." When perfectly fine, bottle in fair weather.

> SHEEP IN KENTUCKY .- Kentucky can boast some fine flocks of sheep, and the growing of wool now is considered quite profitable, and the only objection to increasing their flocks is the only objection to increasing their flocks is the liability of their being killed by dogs. We believe that the apprehension from dogs has believe that the apprehension from dogs has been one of the greatest hindrances to the spread of sheep-husbandry throughout the West, thereby incurring a loss to this fine section of country of millions annually. If all other guards failed of protecting sheep, we would recommend sending to Spain for some Alpine mastiffs, such as are used there to guard the flocks against wolves. Three of these large animals would be sufficient to protect a thousand sheep, and woe to the dog, however pow-erful he might be, that came near them.

> Our sentiments exactly. If, in addition to a strong guard of sheep dogs, we had a law to tax all "curs of low degree," sheep-husbandry would become a very important interest in Kentucky. Speaking of sheep, Jefferson county can boast some as thorough bred as can be found anywhere. An excellent judge remarked that the finest ten Southdowns he ever saw together were those shown by P. S. Barber, Esq., at the late Fair.

CALIFORNIA, IN DOORS AND OUT, by Eliza A. Farnham. Dix, Edwards, & Co., New York Our readers will remember that, soon after the commencement of the rush of immigration to the land of Golden Promise in 1849, Mrs. Farnham advertised a plan for the formation of a company of female emigrants. The plan was never fully carried out, but Mrs Farnham and three other ladies went to California. She evidently belongs to the class of "strong-minded women." She un erwent many hardships and passed through strange vicissitudes peculiar to life in California. She went to work "like a man," undertook the management of a farm, superintended the building of her house, and devoted herself fearlessly to all the duties which devolved upon her in that strange land, where the extremes of life so strangely met and mingled. This volume is a record, "a plain unvarnished tale," of her trials and experience there.

THE RECENT PROGRESS OF ASTRONOMY. By Elias Loomis, L. L. D. Harper & Bros., New York. It is singular that, during the last fifteen years, there has been a greater progress in this eldest of all the sciences than for many years previous. A large portion of this advance has been derived from the observations and discoveries of American astronomers. The old astronomical books have become vastly behind the age, and some publication of the kind before us had become necessary to the requirements of science. Dr. Loomis has very admirably performed this task. He is an accomplished astronomer, and has long occupied the chair of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy in the University of the city of New York.

Scenes and places are clearly and intelligibly described, and incidents are related in a dashing, humorous vein that cannot fail to please.

Mason Brothers, New York -This is the first volume of the Library of Standard Letters, comprising selections from the correspondence of eminent men and women, which Mrs. Hale has undertaken to publish. The editress has justly given to Mme. De Sevigne the precedence in this collection. She has aptly been styled "the most delightful of letter-writers," and her reputation, instead of losing brightness, has only shone with added lustre from the lapse of time. No historian has so graphically depicted the times in which she lived, and the celebrated wits and scholars of those times, as she has done.

We are sorry to learn that our State is about to lose one of her most estimable citizens in the person of D. Howard Smith, Esq., of Scott county, who is about removing with his family to St. Paul, Minnesota. Mr. S. is the model of an intelligent, courteous, upright Kentucky gentleman, and the community to which he goes their society. His high standing as a man among those who know him best has been strikingly manifested in the fact, that, although there is a majority of several hundred against his politics in the county, he has been repeatedly elected, upon his own personal merits, to represent that county in the House of Repre-sentatives, and that he has been for more than three years past the Senator from the district composed of Scott and Fayette. We wish him every success, long life, and happiness in his new home in the Northwest.

Frankfort Commonwealth.

We heartily endorse every word that the Commonwealth says of Mr. D. Howard Smith. In losing him, Kentucky loses one of her brightest ornaments. He is a lofty model in all the relations of both private and public life. The blessings of thousands will go with him and his excellent family to their new home, and may the richest blessings of heaven go with them too.

EXCITING SKIRMISHES WITH THE INDIANS IN Texas.—The following description of the successful repulse of Indians by Captain S. D. Carpenter, of the army, was extracted from a letter of the acting surgeon of Camp Lancaster, giving an account of the affair, partly as a spectator at some distance and partly as he was informed at the time by those immediately en-

CAMP LANCASTER, TEXAS,
October 16, 1856.
A few days since, our camp was in a high state of excitement in consequence of a brush with the Indians and the fears entertained of the entire loss of our party. Capt. Carpenter, of the first Infantry, who commands this post, went out with a mule team to procure some poles for the purposes of the encampment. The party consisted only of the captain, armed with a fowling piece and a revolver, two musicians with rifles, privates McCulloch and Dennon with muskets, and the teamster, who was un armed. I accompanied them, carrying my fow-ling-piece, loaded only with very fine shot used for ornithological purposes, in the expectation that I might come across some small birds. Not the slightest danger of any attack was appre-needed.

It was found necessary to go further than had been expected to procure poles of the required length; but they were at last obtained, he team loaded, and we were on our return to the camp, the Ospiain, musician Beardall, and myself riding a short distance in advance, not having seen anything to excite the least alarm. While thus on our homeward way, the Captain, on turning round, saw that the team had come to a stop, and rode back with Beardall to ascertain what was the difficulty. I kept my ground, watching their progress and intending to await their return. On their way back they passed through a hollow; and, losing sight of them, I was looking every moment for their reappearance on rising the other side; when, imagine my consternation on seeing a party of Indians, some on foot and some on horseback, suddenly make their appearance between me and my friends, who were nowhere to be seen.

My interest was intense—there was not a shadow of doubt on my mind that the captain and Beardall had been cut off before they reached the men and team, which were now surrounded and must inevitably share the same fate. My eyes still rivetted on the spat, one man, whom I recognized as the unarmed team ster, burst from the throng, pursued by an In-dian—the race was one for life or death—it soon terminated, down went the man exhausted or killed. Horor struck, I waited to see if any more of our friends would attempt escape, but I could see only the Indians running about yelling triumphantly; it was evident the whole of our party had been cut off without firing a

While still intent on the horrid scene, the Indian who had run down the teamster turned to wards me, having been joined by another hell-bird mounted on a piebaid horse. This roused me from my trance; not a moment was to be lost; our camp was five or six miles distant; I stranger to the road, my horse was n to me: I had never been accustomed to hurdle races over ravines and through thorny bushes my chance for escape was small, but my life was at stake. I put my horse to his utmost speed, and he gained upon my pursuers. Hav-ing satisfied myself of his nerve, and that he good for the race, I turned to take one last look at the scene of action. Indians only were

There was then but one course to pursue find my way, if possible, back to the camp and give the alarm. Well did my horse do his duty; etting him take his own way, I reached the camp in safety, and a strong party was immediately sent off in pursuit of the Indians, to avenge the death and, if possible, recover the dead bodies of our friends. On their route, much to their astonishment, they met Captain Carpenter with his men and their horses and one of the mules, the rest of the team having been carried off by the Indians. The account given by them was as follows: On approaching the men and team Capt. Car-penter saw that they were nearly surrounded by from fifteen to twenty Indians, armed with rifles and bows and arrows, some on foot and some on horseback. When joining his men they had their guns raised about to fire, the Indians then being at long rifle shot. mediately ordered his men to hold their fire. and to lay down in the grass of the prairie Their guns once discharged, he was aware that there would be no time to reload, and that they would be rode down and crushed by the superior number of the enemy. This timely order being obeyed saved the party.

The Indians being thus defeated in their project of stampeding our men, and not deeming it safe to approach them on horseback, dismounted and advanced on foot; and, when sufficiently near, commenced a fire with their rifles and bows and arrows. This fire was continued for afteen minutes, the Indians drawing nearer and nearer; our men crouched in the grass, sustaining but little injury, the rifle balls passing over them, and few of the arrows taking effect; still they reserved their fire. When the Indians had approached within four rods then the word was given to fire; four were killed, and the rest ran without stopping to look behind them. The injury sustained on our side was the cap tain wounded by an arrow, passing between the fingers of his left hand; private McCulloch, wounded by an arrow in his foot; the captain's horse so badly cut with an arrow in his leg, that it was with some difficulty the blood could be staunched sufficiently to enable him to be led back to the camp. The mule team which, during the affray, had strayed away, feeding, had been carried off by the Indians, with the exception of one which on their precipitate retreat they had left in the harness. The unarmed teamster, whom I had seen run-ning and thought was killed, had fallen down the banks of a creek and had escaped unhurt. You will readily believe that the rejoicing was great at this meeting of our friends, whom we had mourned as dead; and most gladly were they welcomed back to the camp, which they reached without any further disaster. I have may well be proud of such an acquisition to now seen the simon pure native American, and

> PUTNAM AS A SPY .- Among the officers of the revolutionary army, none, probably, possessed more originality than General Putnam, who was eccentric and fearless, blunt in his manners, the daring soldier without the polish of a gentleman. He might well be called the Marion of the North, though he disliked disquise, probably from the though he disliked disguise, probably from the fact of his lisping, which was very apt to over-throw any trickery which he might have in

> At this time, a stronghold called Horseneck. some miles from New York, was in the hands of the British. Pulnam, with a few sturdy patriots, was lurking in the vicinity, bent on driving them from the place. Tired of lurking in ambush, the men began to be impatient, and importuned the General with the question, as to when they were to have a bout with the foe One morning he made a speech something to the following effect, which convinced them that something was in the wind:

> "Fellows, you have been idle too long, and so have ox-team and bag of corn. If I core back, I will let you know the particulars; if I should not, let them have it by hookey."

He soon afterwards mounted his ox-cart, dressed as one of the commonest of Yankee farmers, and was soon at Buck's tavern, which was in possession of the British troops. No sooner did the officers espy him than they began to question him as to his whereabouts, and finding him a complete simpleton as they thought they began to quiz him, and threatened to seize the corn and fodder.

"How much do you ask for your whole con cern?" asked they.

"For mercy's sake, gentlemen," replied the mock clod-hopper, with the most deplorable look of entreaty: "Only let me off, and you shall have my hull team and load for nothing, and if that don't dew, I'll give my word I'll return to-morrow, and pay you heartily for your kindness and condescension."

kindness and condescension."
"Well," said they, "we'll take your word.
Leave the team and provender with us, and we won't require any bad bail for your appearance."

Pu'nam gave up the team, and sauntered about for an hour or so, gaining all the information he wished. He then returned to his men and told them of the toe, and the plan of attack.

The morning came, and with it sallied out the gallant band. The British were handled with rough hands, and when they surrendered to General Putnam, the clod-hopper, he sarcastically remarked:

"Gentlemen, I have kept my word. I told you I would call and pay you for your kindness and condescension."

SPLENDID HOUSES IN NEW YORK -As affording some idea of the extent to which the "merchant princes" of New York have invested in private mansions it is stated that there are at least a dozen houses in that city which cost from one hundred to one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, rivalling in magnificence almost any of the royal palaces of Europe and inferior only in point of magnitude. The Journal of Commerce thus speaks of several of them:

One of our most elegant houses is that of Charles A. Heckscher, just completed, on the corner of Fifth avenue and Thirteenth street, and which is said to have cost in the neighborhood of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, although the building is of moderate dimen-sions compared with some others, being thirtynine by sixty-two feet, besides an extension of thirty five by twenty-four feet, which forms the library and dining-room; and viewed externally its appearance is not remarkably ostentatious. The interior finishing and decorations, however, are very superb. In the main entrance there is a vestibule fitted for the reception of ordinary vestions and clock by the strength of the reception of ordinary vestions and clock by the strength of the reception of ordinary vestions and clock by the strength of the reception of ordinary vestions and clock by the strength of the reception of ordinary vestions and clock by the strength of the reception of ordinary vestions and clock by the strength of the reception of ordinary vestions. tion of ordinary visitors, and, close by, the starr-case ascends through an elliptical opening toward a stained glass dome. Immediately beneath the latter, on a massive base, is Kiss's celebrated bronze figure of the Shepherd at acked by a Panther, and among other bronze decorations are duplicates of mantel ornaments possessed by Louis Napoleon. The mirrors are very massive, in curiously wrought frames the ceilings are arched in strong relief, with a groundwork of water colors and the prominent points tipped with gold. The walls are to be laid over with satin in heavy folds. The furniture is in a corresponding style of elegance and consists principally of elaborately carved oak. A number of articles are veneered with oaken crotches in the most exquisite manner, so as to closely resemble choice varieties of marble. The library case is almost wholly of oak, and has a lofty arched ceiling, ventilated from the top and surrounded with Tasso, Schiller, Gœ'he, and other celebrated personages. Other apartments are provided for various amusements, and all are fitted up with a view to secure the greatest possible amount of bodily comfort.

Probably the most elegant dwelling in the city is that of M. O. Roberts, reputed to have cost in the neighborhood of two hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars. The residence of Moses Taylor is a dwelling fitted up in the most gorgeous style, not less than fifty-four thousand dollars having been expended in four or five of the apartments. One of these was fitted up at a cost of from twenty-five to thirty thousand dollars.

San Francisco Correspondence of the N. Orieans Picayune.] MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE IN CALIFORNIA-Advice to Ladies. - By reference to the law columns of our journals, you perceive that we are in, on an average, for four divorces every day; and, what is not a little singular, the application generally comes from the weaker vessel. haps you will get your ears pulled for publishing it, but I must in all fairness say the root of the evil is that women are naturally a li tle too fond of admiration. Here, in this city, we have at least seven men to one woman, and in the interior the disproportion is much larger. The consequence is, that, as in the case of all scarce commodities, the article commands more than its intrinsic value. "It is a good deal sought after," as the quotations sometimes run on a popular railroad stock. The feminine is quickly caged; the husband is in extacles for about a fortnight, but not quite so exalted the succeeding two weeks. forty other lovers, not easily finding another unappropriated piece of dimity to soothe their disappointment, make friendly calls upon the lost Pleiade, and by exceeding sympathy with her at the coolness of her hus band, win her regard, and then their attentions are so much more delicate than those of her ord that the poor weak thing finds she has committed a great error in her choice, especially if the new flame is rich and generous, and the old one rather plain and economical. An application for divorce is the result. Hundreds have no other excuse to offer in making the application than "uncongenial dis-positions" and dislike. The process is the sim-The process is the simplest imaginable. A lawyer with an easy conscience is engaged—most San Francisco lawyers have easy consciences when they have any who receives the fee from the new lover. referee is then hunted up by the lawyer, who agrees to decide according to the lady's wishes for a portion of the fee The judge of course refers the application as requested. The referee hands his report into court, where it is often passed upon without a word of open tes timony—and, nine cases out of ten, favorably.

The lady is then ready to be married again—and having lost all delicacy by the process she has gone through, is ready to run away with the next lover without a divorce.

My advice to weak headed ladies in the Atlantic States is, not to come to California to get married—and not to come after they are mar-ried; if they are pretty "and interesting" they are much safer anchored in some snug harbor in the Atlantic than in the open roadsteads among the shoals and breakers of the Pacific.

But for the encouragement of those who have determined to come, I will quote from the Bulletin the following advertisement. plain cook, thirty-five years of age, has to give bonds not to marry within six months, it stands to reason that a tender little chicken of about half that age would stand no chance at all of pining away for lack of a husband up at Rabbit Creek:

ANECDOTE OF NAPOLEON I .- Napoleon was accustomed to wear a coat of mail under his clothes, and which he rarely went without. On his departure once for Belgium, he thought it best to guard against those dangers with which he was threatened, having all Europe leagued against him, by every means in his power. He accordingly sent for a clever workman and asked him if he thought himself competent to make a coat of mail of such texture that no weapon whatever could penetrate. On the artificer answering in the aftrate. On the artificer answering in the affirmative, Napoleon agreed to give him 18,000 francs, the sum asked. On the day fixed, the man brought his work to the palace. Napoleon quickly examined it, and ordered the workman to put it on himself. The man obeyed. Napoleon took two pistols, saying, "We shall now see whether this coat of mail is of the texture you promised me" He fired at his breast, the cuirass resisted. "Turn around." The man obeyed. The second ball struck his back with the same result. The poor artificer, half dead with fright, thought poor artificer, half dead with fright, thought these trials would be sufficient, but he was mistaken in his calculation. Bonaparte next armed himself with a long fowling piece, made the same experiment on the should back, and breast of the trembling patient. Happily the cuirass resisted and saved the inventor from so cruel a trial. "How much am I to pay you?" said Napoleon after this noble exploit. "Eeighteen thousand francs," stam-mered the affrighted artificer "No such thing, sir," said Napoleon, "I shall give you thirty-six thousand francs," and gave an order on his treas-jority 9,421. The 10 counties to hear from gave Clark 472 majority. GREAT BRITAIN .- We find the following particulars of the fatal accident at the Music Hall, Surrey Gardens, while the Rev. Mr. Spurgeon was preaching, in the London Morning Post and other papers:

Before the service commenced, the enthusiasm within, and even without, the building was intense. After the preacher had proceeded for some minutes, on a sudden the hysterical scream and subsequent fainting of a female in the gallery to the left of Mr. Spurgeon, and at the further end of the building, occasioned a commotion. Presently the people at the doors cried "Firel" (there really had been a strong smell of fire a tew minutes previously); others called out, "The building! the building is falling!" and then—from above, in the galleries, in the hall, and from all sides—rose a volley of censes and Regulations of Taverns and places for Retailing Liquors.

The preacher paused in terror. Viewed from the orchestra, the body of the hall presented a scene of dire confusion and agonised excitement. Fortunately, from the floor being encumbered by seats, a moment's obstruction was given to the rush. That moment saved the lives of many who would have been overwhelm-ed in the tremendous onset toward the door, and gave time for more tranquil observation. preacher, recovering himself, implored silence. assured the people of safety, and while the shrieks and screams still resounded, and terrible groans were beginning to be heard, set up a hymn, which, at first loudly chanted from the orchestra, soon spread itself over the troubled congregation in the body of the hall, who now seeing the roof still above them, and the galleries still crowded with listeners, terror-stricken, yet eagerly hanging upon the preacher's words, thus encouraged, joined in the hymn. No so in the galleries. There a rush was made to the circular staircase on the right side, facing the entrance. Down this a stream of fright ned men, women, and children, poured, rushing in terror, and impelled from behind by crowds in still greater alarm. Turning upon the stairs of the second gallery, a slight curve is made by the balustrades. There, unfortu-nately, from the overwhelming pressure, the mahogany handrail broke, and the balustrades gave way one after the other for about three yards. Urged by the crowd above, those be-low fell over the sides, down the well staircase to the stone floor beneath. The first who tumclasped in her arms; then came another woman, then two men, and others followed. Meantime. the crowd from the end of the hall below rushing round the passage, forcing their way outwards over the dead and dying. The groans and screams were such as might be fancied in Pandemonium.

Those who rushed first from the hall made their way in panic to the garden gates, which they found closed. These making the story known to the people outside, the gates were at once borne down with a rush, and a new ele-ment added to the terror and confusion. Fresh crowds poured into the hall. As they tramped hurriedly up the grand walk the noise they made gave occasion to a new panic, which Mr. Spurgeon vainly attempted to tranquillise by another hymn. At last, on the remonstrance of the inspector in attendance, that "he was hindered in removing the dead by the crowding of the people," a gentleman took upon himself to explain the exact position of affairs to Mr. Spurgeon, who immediately "dismissed his congregation."

Earthquake at Malta -On Sunday, the 25th of October, at eleven minutes before 2 o'clock M., the islands of Malta and Gozo were visited by shocks of an earthquake, so violent in their nature and so long in their duration that the oldest inhabitants do not remember ever to have experienced anything so severe. The first shock made itself perceptible by a tremulous motion similar to that caused by the pass ing of a heavy gun-carriage a thousand times repeated, accompanied by a rumbling noise of distant thunder, which rapidly increased in violence until every building trembled. Scarcea minute had elapsed when a more violent shock, accompanied by a louder noise, oc-curred. The alarm occasioned was general throughout town and country.

Men, women, and children, suddenly aroused from their slumbers, issued from every house, rushing into the streets, made the best of thei way to the squares and other spaces, which soon became full of people. The sentry at the Treasury left his post and ran to the main guard, which he turned out, under the impression that shells were being thrown into the town by an enemy from some steam fleet. The two shocks the interval being so brief as to be incalculable lasted two minutes. In the city of Valetta scarcely a building escaped injury, and all corner structures have more particularly suffered. Of the Roman Catholic churches, those of San Giscome, St. Occasion and St. December 1 Giacomo, St. Orsolo, and St. Domenico appear to have suffered most. At Floriana and in each of the three cities. as well as in the harbor, the shocks were felt with considerable vigor, and at Sengles, Cospi cua, and Vittorioso, many of the buildings are injured. Persons on board ships in the port describe the effects of the earthquake, as felt by them, as of letting go the ship's boats from the davits by the run, only much stronger. The sea receded two feet and a half. The night had been without a breath of air, with a sultry sensation, the sea perfectly calm, and the moon shining in a clear sky with a brightness that seemed to transform night into day, it being twenty-one hours of full moon.

At Civita Vecchia, in the interior of the island, all the churches, monasteries, nunneries, and hospitals (the church of St. Augustine excepted) sustained greater or less damage. The dome of the cathedral is rent so as to admit the light, and the belfry is much shaken.
In Malta it is usual to ring the bells of the churches on occasion of imminent danger, and on Sunday, soon after the shocks had ceased, a burst of tintinabulary sounds was everywhere burst of tintinabulary sounds was everywhere to be heard.

On the same day a Te Deum or thanksgiving was chanted in all the churches, to which was added the ceremony of the holy sacrament and sermons were delivered to crowded congregations. So impressed were the natives with the common persuasion that a repetition of the phe-

Sentries report a great red glare in the heavens to have preceded the outbreak, and all the market dogs joined chorus in a yell and bowl for an hour or two previous. The thermometer stood at about 74 and the barometer at 30.11; there was a slight fall in both shortly after.

[Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times ] INTERESTING FROM ST. DOMINGO. American Consul Insulted—Progress of the Spanish designs on the Dominican Kepub-lic.

Sr. Domingo City, Oct. 15, 1856. On the night of the 11th of October, a mob. instigated by Mr. A. M. Segovia, Spanish Con-sul-General, assembled before the United States Consulate, for the purpose of pulling down the flag-staff and the sign, throwing stones against the eagle, and making the greatest disorder. There were also cries of "Down with the fillibusters!—down with the American ensign!"

The American Consul, Mr. Jacob Pereira, repaired to the spot for the purpose of impos-ing respect, but all his efforts were in vain. Not being able at that moment to obtain any assistance from the authorities, he was obliged, for the safety of his person and life, to leave the place of disorder. A greater outrage by Spaniards was never committed in any civilized country, and it shows that the Spanish Consul is determined to trample on the honor of the United States Government. He has not only compelled this Government to withdraw the treaty just made with the United States, but he is doing all in his power to break down the United States Consulate, anp poison the goodnatured Dominicans against Americans. In this scheme he will succeed, if some serious measures are not taken at once by the United

The morning, after the riot, the American Consul represented the case to the Government of an official note, and the Mayor was immediately informed of the conduct of Mr. Segovia. The Mayor then called on the American Consul to offer him protection, and a file of soldiers, to impose that respect which was due to the U.S. Consulate. This was, however, refused by Mr. Pereira, who stated that the American flag needed no guard to cause it to be respected, and that he was then prepared to meet any mob that might appear. But all dis-turbance was soon quelled. Mr. Segovia took frighs and remained at home.

This is not all. Segovia has turned Santa bled over was a well dressed woman, who struck upon her head and died without a groan; the second another respectably dressed female. who fell screaming in an agony, with a child have a Spanish army to meet the Americans, have a Spanish army to meet the Americans, and the Americans, and for aught we know, will soon have a Spanish army to meet the Americans, and the Americans and the Americans, and the Americans and the Americans, and the Americans and the American Minister, Delmonte, the second another respectably dressed female. when they demand satisfaction for wiihdraw ing their treaty. Can the United States Gov ernment allow this Segovia to abuse their rights and break down the Dominican Republic, or will the American people consent to it, questions we want answered. The Dominians are crying out for assistance every day, but not even a vessel of war is to be seen Roads of St. Domingo. A DOMINICAN.

> ARRIVAL OF MAJOR BEN PERLEY POORE IN BOSTON WITH HIS BARREL OF APPLES. - Boston. Friday, Nov. 7 - Major Ben. Perley Poore, the late Fillmore candidate for Congress in the Sixth District, arrived in the city this

The Major, wheeling his apples, was escorted up State street about 2 o'clock by the Fillmore Clubs of Boston and Charlestown, a military company, and a mounted cavalcade of civizens. The novelty of the performance collected many thousands of the performance col-lected many thousands of the people, and the Major was greeted with tremendous and tumul-tuous applause on all sides. He delivered the apples to Col. Burbank on the steps of the Trement House, when both gentlemen delivernumbers. A private letter from one of the au barrel. Ten thousand people were present.

> Wrecks during October. — The Journal of Commerce gives the names of 32 American sea-going vessels which were reported as totally lost during the month of October. The value of the vessels thus lost is stated $304,900, and that of the cargoes at $268,350. in four instances the wrecks were attended with loss of life. The Journal of Commerce thinks that the value of the unknown cargoes would probably bring the gress total up to $700,000. This is independent of the loss incurred by vessels merely going ashore, of which there were many during the month. There were also some very severe losses, both of life and property on the lakes, which are not in-

MECHANISM OF THE HORSE.—The function of the fore leg is mainly that of supporting the weight of the body, head, and neck, and of transferring that weight forward from point to goint, the time the animalis in motion. In pering is much the same as that of a spoke in a carriage-wheel. It is in fact a lever, in which, to give increased speed, the power acts at a dis-advantage; the fulcrum or fixed point being at the long end of the lever, while the power and weight act near each other at the short. This long portion or arm of the lever is the leg from long portion or arm of the lever is the leg from the elbow to the ground, the toe being the fixed point over which the body is raised, and hence any addition made to the length of the toe has the same effect upon the horse as the placing a block before the wheel of a carriage has on it. If acts against the muscular power of the animal as used in the raising and carrying forward at his weight, and, if ridden, of the weight of his rider, and though only requiring a small additional effort at each step, tells materially in a day's journey. Every one the least judge of houses can tell of the advantage of having them short below the knee and is ready to despise stort below the knee and is ready to despise as misshapen any one that has the reverse de-fect. But there seem few (hereabout at least) who have got so far as the consecutive idea, namely, that to cultivate an additional inch of much to the length of the bone below the knee, in fact for the horse, worse, as the addition is made at the point of greatest disadvantage. In the hind leg, though the functions of the parts be different, the effects of a long toe are equal, if any odds worse. The main use of the hand leg is the propulsion of the body forward, and when hauling of the load also. In effecting this the leg from the hock to the ground is a lever also of the second class. The power is the muscles, whose tendons are inserted into the point of the hock, the resistance is concentrated the tibia or bone of the leg, where it forms the hock joint, and the fixed point of the lever is the point of the toe upon the ground. From this it is plain on the simplest mechanical evidence, that anything ad led to the length of the tocks so much leverage placed against the animal's power of hauling, and consequently that he must either do less work, or else exert himself more in the doing of it.

Mechanical disadvantage to the horse in the performance of his work, however, is but one of the evils following the long toes common in this country. Another equally great often arises when he is standing at rest.

Every one knows what is meant by a horse being "sprung in the knees" For the information of those who are curious to know how this condition is produced, I will explain one of its causes. The bones of the foot and pastern of the horse do not stand perpendicularly above each other, but slope backwards, a considerable portion of the animal's weight resting on the ndons that pass down the back of the leg, and hence, the greater the slope, the more the house to stand with his head uphill, mor ertion is needed to sustain himself than if standing on a level. The reason is that the bones of the foot and pastern are thereby placed more obliquely, and more of his weight is thrown upon the tendons and muscles, and thus a wearied horse, if left to himself, always feeds with his head down hill. But we slope of the feot and pastern the same by adding to the length of the hoof and shoe, as by placing the horse's head up hill, and with greater permanency of effects, as we leave him no power to relieve himself. Often the two conditions are conjoined, the toes are injuriously long, and the horse is confined ninetentas of his time in a sloping stall. Here the muscular exertion of sustaining his weight soon becomes irksome. He shifts from one foot to amother, but finds it only a temporary relief. The muscles connected with the tendons that pass down the back part of the leg to the foot soon begin to relax till the weight falls on the ligamentous straps behind and below the knee. Then the bones of the pastern and foot become Then the bones of the pastern and foot become still more sloping, and to sustain his body perpendicularly above his feet, and still more to relax the muscles, the knee bulges out in front to a line with the projecting toe. This at first occurs only new and then, when the horse is smeared or forgetful, his posture becoming enteral and proper when roused up. By-and-by, however, it becomes a habit, and the causes being permanent and constant in their action. being permanent and constant in their action, the effects soon become the same, and we have the torse for life "sprung in the knees."

Many a valuable horse, tottering on the brink of this condition, has been saved and brought back to usefulness, by having his feet pat in proper shape, and a run at grass, or a toose box to stand in allowed him, while others are whom the torture of long toes and sloping. on whom the torture of long toes and sloping stalls was preserved with, have become perma-

Another evil, resulting from the length at which the toes are commonly left, is interfer-ing. The horse, finding the long projection in front of his foot as so much leverage acting to his disadvantage, gradually gets into a habit of shifting it, by raising himself from one or the other of the quarters. This is still more the case when, in addition to the long toe left on the hoof, a small round knob of steel is set into the point of the shee, as if in contempt of at that nature teaches. With these absurd trivances placed between his weight and the ground that supports it, it is next to impossible for a horse to raise himself evenly upward and for ward, and hence the number that on way or mustiner interfere. If in raising his weight from the ground, the pressure be upon the in-side quarter of the foot, then the thick part of the pastern is thrown inward, in the way of beang struck by the upper edge of the hoof of the other side. If the cant be the other way, and the satisfied quarter raise the weight, the inside edge of the shoe is thrown round and upward, and runs the risk of cutting with it the oppo-site leg. Even when the horse from having a naturally good gait escapes both these evils, still he is not free from trouble caused by

The fore foot of the horse, as nature makes it, has no such projection in front and downsward as that which the smiths here give it, but maker the reverse. The sole surface at the toe the middle, so that the pressure, when the foot strikes the ground or the animal is raising his weight, is distributed over the whole front of the foot. weight, is distributed over the whole front of the foot. In accordance with this, the coffin bone, which fills the internal cavity of the hoof, has the same turned up and notched back form. In England, France, and on the continent of Europe generally, wherever veterinary schools exist, and scientific attention is given to shoeing, this natural form of foot is more or less followed in the shape of the shoe, and the animal tras preserved to him, along with the protection from wear which the shoegives, the position of tread for which nature has constructed the mechanical arrangements of his organs of tread for which nature has constructed the star mechanical arrangements of his organs of motion. Why it is not so here is perhaps partially due to the use of the buttris for cleaning out the foot when it is shod, as it is impossible with this antiquated instrument to bring the hoof to the proper shape in all its parts; but it is more so to want of study, on the part of these who shoe, of the structure of the foot, fits uses, and the relation existing between it and the other motive organs, the bones, tendons, and ligaments of the limbs.—Dr. Cumming.
